I want to express my deepest and sincerest gratitude to my advisor, Prof. Chin-yuan Hu, who has initiated me into the studies of travel literature. In her 2006 graduate course “Travel Literature,” I explored travel theories and wrote a term paper which has became the basis of my MA thesis. During the hard times of my thesis writing, Prof. Hu was always ready for help. Her intellectual acumen and commitment have helped refine my ideas and my prose. I have benefited not only from her instruction, but also from her example as teacher.

I am also indebted to Prof. Claire Hsun-huei Chang and Prof. Hung-chiung Li for their invaluable comments and knowledgeable suggestions. My friends and classmates, Da-rong, Ting-jia, Shao-wei, Tsung-hua, Pao-han, have been a constant source of inspiration, not to mention indispensable help. The teachers and the student-teachers in Ping-jen Senior High School have given me their moral support, which in some way has helped speed the completion of the thesis.

To my parents and my two younger sisters, I am heartily thankful for their unfailing love and support. They always stand by my side, providing me with a sweet home to relax my mind and body. Their faith in me has kept me going during the most difficult times. Writing this thesis has been a long journey. However, working on a topic that has never been dealt with makes this journey extremely rewarding.
