To Professor Brian David Phillips
獻給我的恩師 羅狼仁 教授
Acknowledgement

I would like to thank Professor Brian David Phillips first for his guidance in the process of my thesis writing. Were it not for his patient and attentive instructions, it would be difficult for me to finish the thesis. I am also grateful for the encouragement, which the Chair of English Department, Huei-Ling Lai, gave me. She often encourages me to “move on continually,” so “move on continually!” becomes one of my mottoes. In addition, I feel gratitude to Professor Eva Yin-I Chen, Professor Tsui-Fen Jiang, and Professor Hsin-Ying Li not only for their academic suggestions but also for their everyday ones. The three years in National Chengchi University for me means not merely to grow up academically but also to become mature mentally.

Finally, I would like to thank my family members for the financial and mental supports from them. My father works diligently to support the whole family, and my mother as a housewife can always deal with household duties aptly. As regards my younger sister, she is such a considerate person that she often reminds me of not fatiguing myself too much. My warm family is like a harbor: whenever I feel world-weary I can steer myself like a boat into the secure harbor of my warm family.
