It is by no means easy for me to finish writing this thesis. I did not expect that it would take me so many years to complete the writing. With the repeatedly prolonged duration, I have completely lost my confidence which I once gained as I just passed the entrance exam for graduate school. Never was I able to imagine the day I could make my thesis an end. Looking back on this overlong process now, I realize that writing a thesis entails passion, patience, and a great deal of soul-searching. It is quite a long journey, and it means a lot to me. Furthermore, I cannot accomplish my thesis and get the M.A. degree without the assistance, moral support, and encouragement I have received from many. I feel immense gratitude to those who give me great support and help me go through the pains of thesis-writing.

First of all, I am deeply indebted to my advisor, Prof. Li-ling Tseng, who inspires my interest in Ulysses and initiates me into the study of Joyce. In the process of thesis writing, Prof. Tseng’s comments and suggestions lead me to the issues crucial to the main concerns of my thesis. Prof Tseng has raised many critical questions to some of my arguments which appear to be vague and immature. With the help of Prof. Tseng’s critical viewpoints, my mind becomes clarified on those arguments. I also truly appreciate Prof. Tseng’s careful reading and correction of my writing. I have learned a lot in the revisions of the writing and the thesis’s structure. In addition, I want to thank Prof. Tseng for her perpetual concern and patience. When I suffered an unexpected trouble in my family, Prof. Tseng encouraged me and gave me precious moral support which was indeed great comfort to me at that time. Whenever I was behind schedule, Prof. Tseng showed her patience with my belatedness—this saved me from being weighed down by the stress of deadlines. Moreover, Prof. Tseng offers me valuable advice on the healthy attitude and manner in thesis writing, with which I can improve my working in the future.
I also want to thank my committee members, Prof. Chien-chi Liu and Prof. Sun-chieh Liang, for their insightful comments on my thesis in the oral defense. I am obliged to Prof. Chien-chi Liu for his curricular instructions from which I have learned a lot. Additionally, Prof. Liu’s erudition and earnestness in his study set an example to me. The encouraging remarks Prof. Liu makes always inspire confidence in me. To Prof. Liang, I am heartily grateful for his scrutinizing my thesis. Prof. Liang’s penetrating suggestions and notes carefully written on the margins are very inspiring for me. And, Prof. Liang’s comments in the thesis defense call my attention to some related issues which I may explore in the future. His words are an encouragement to me.

My deep thanks also go to my dear friends for their being constantly supportive. To Gus, words cannot express my sincere thankfulness to you. Thank you for being around and generously lending me a hand whenever I am in need of help. Without your timely assistance, I would never pass the thesis defense smoothly. Without whatever information and suggestions you have provided me, I would never survive the pains of thesis writing. To Hsiao-yin, thank you for your moral support. You always phoned just in time and saved me from some devastating depression. To Sherry, thank you for thinking of me when you say your prayers. It makes me feel you are around me even though you are still living abroad. To Shao-yu, thank your for always being understanding and cheering me up. Your visits help me discard some depressing thoughts. To Brenda, thank you for your confidence in me, which is more than I have in myself. It does make me heartened whenever I am upset. To Sunny, thank you for graciously sharing with me your insightful understanding of Foucault’s conception. Your knowledge is very helpful for me to deal with the perplexing Foucauldian theorizing. To Allen, thank you for your encouraging remarks by which I am really touched. I do enjoy the once-in-a-while gathering; your humor impresses me. More importantly, I need to thank you three—Brenda, Sunny, and Allen—for being tolerant of my emotional status and showing your concern in thoughtful ways. To Ben, thank you for entertaining me with your unique style and idiosyncratic jokes, weird but funny. To Ann and Tracy, thank you for your encouragement and being understanding and supportive all the time. Though we seem to be on different tracks now, our friendship will always help me survive the difficult time (if there is any) in the future. To Zoe and Tsui-sung, thank you for showing your timeless consideration for me. Your moral support brings me a lot of warmth especially when I was feeling down during the writing. To Hui-ching, thank you for sharing unselfishly with me your experience in thesis defense. Your advice is indeed of great help for me. To Ya-lan, Wan-ching, Chih-min, and Fang-yu, thank you for your moral support in time. Your encouraging words keep me working on with the greatest amount of patience. To Kuan-po, Li-chun, and Tsung-hsun, thank you very much for solving my computer problems especially during the time I have to write my thesis. In addition, I must thank Betty, Jennifer, and Anny—the TAs of English Department, who have been taking great care of me during the six-year life in Chengda. Again, thank you all for your support which always makes me feel recharged whenever I am losing my energy and confidence in myself.

Last but not least, I want to express my deepest thanks to my father, mother, and younger brother. My gratitude is beyond words. I am deeply indebted to their unfailing support, both in the emotional and the financial aspects. During the process of my thesis writing, they are very patient with me and supportive to my decisions. They always encourage me not to be afraid of challenges. Their utter confidence in me is what moves me toward the end of thesis. To Pa, Ma, and Kuan-po, thank you, thank you, and thank you. Without any of you, I can never make my thesis and degree possible. I want to dedicate my thesis to you, and hope that you will be proud of me.
