

Acknowledgements

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to all those who gave me their support in completing this thesis. I want to thank the International Master's Program in China Studies in the College of Social Sciences, specifically the director of the program Steve Tsai for giving me permission to come back to my alma mater to learn how to do research work and to use departmental data. I further would like to thank the former administrative assistants Angus, Arthur, and Only for helping me complete all the paperwork necessary in past two years. To all the professors who kindly taught me, Nancy Chen, John Chao, Lee Ming, J.T. Huang, and all others who taught me how to do research practically and who helped me complete my thesis.

In addition, I appreciate the guidance of Professor Keng Shu, who gave me faith to complete thesis after the first oral defense, Professor Tsai Ming-Yen from Chung-Xing University, who also gave me lots of good advice. I am also deeply indebted to my thesis advisor Dr. Wang Ding-Shu whose help, stimulating suggestions and encouragement helped me throughout the research and writing of this thesis.

I also want to thank my parents, my supportive boyfriend Benson, who sacrificed his time to drive me to school these past two years, and my good friend Bruce Hu who helped me check my English grammar and style, correcting both and offering suggestions for improvement. Finally, I would like to give my special thanks to God, whose patient love enabled me to complete this work.
