Shower (Xi Zao)
Plot: An award winning film, "Shower" indeed is the second feature film by the talented Zhang Yang. The film evolving around a family and a public bathhouse in China, depicting the fading of Chinese tradition for the modern world. It also examines the relations between father and sons, and brothers. Director Zhang Yang follows up the wildly popular Spicy Love Soup with Shower, a funny and disarmingly real portrait of a family and their traditional bathhouse. Da Ming (He Zheng) is an avowed urban professional who returns home to Beijing when he receives news that leads him to believe his father has passed away. But dad (Zhu Xu) is alive, and still running the family bathhouse with Da Ming's mentally-challenged brother Er Ming (Jiang Wu). Da Ming immediately tries to return to his work, but within a matter of days, he begins to discover just what's lacking from his relationship with his family. Disparate values, cultures, generations, and experiences separate the three men, and soon he discovers that many possibilities - and even the hope of reconciliation - can be found at the bathhouse, which is a place where life and community can be found almost everyday. Director Zhang Yang uses everyday details of the Beijing bathhouse to create a charming film filled with real characters facing real situations.

Ma Shan drank too much in the party and does not recall what might have happen with his weapon. He falls in disgrace with his superiors and investigates who might have stolen the gun. When his former sweetheart Li Xiaomeng is found dead with a shot of his weapon, he becomes the prime suspect. Source: IMDb

I Love You (Wo Ai Ni)
Plot: A young woman who has lost her first love begins a relationship with his best friend, and the two of them attempt to create a baggage-free future. Source: IMDb

2003

Cell Phone (Shou Ji)
Plot: Mainland director Feng Xiaogang has recently become popular in the Western world with his epic The Banquet and the Andy Lau-starring A World Without Thieves, but he has been one of the biggest names in China for many years. His popular 2003 movie Cell Phone, an excellent suspense thriller filled with black humor, is definitely worth a see. Best actor winner Ge You, who stars in almost every Feng Xiaogang movie, plays a popular TV program host in the film. The ubiquitous cell phone absurdly becomes the source of all troubles for this poor man! Everything begins with his wife discovering his illicit affairs when he leaves his cellphone at home. A World Without Thieves (Tian xia wu zei)

Plot: Long partners in love and crime, the two thieves meet a country farmer named Xa Gen (Wang Baoqiang) in a train station. The naive, honest Xa Gen is convinced that he lives in a "world without thieves", but the very train he's boarding is proof of the contrary. Besides Wang Bo and Wang Li, legendary thief Uncle Bill is on board, and he and his men are ready to take Xa Gen's savings for themselves. Uncle Bill is also determined to outwit Wang Bo - and he just might have his chance. When Wang Li decides to protect Xa Gen from Uncle Bill's men, Wang Bo finds himself caught in the middle. Unlike Feng Xiaogang's popular satirical comedies, A World Without Thieves is an idealistic motion picture mixing a commercial storyline with an unparalleled collection of pan-Asian actors, including Hong Kong superstar Andy Lau, Taiwanese singer-actor Rene Liu, Mainland star Ge Yu, Hong Kong actor Gordon Lam, and
Zhang Side
Plot: Film about the life of Mao's bodyguard and soldier.

Baober in Love (Liang ai zhong de Bao Bei)
Plot: Liu Zhi is a teenager searching for love at first sight. His wish comes true one day when he drops his favorite DVD, and it is picked up by the charming Baober. 2006
The Banquet (Ye yan)
Plot: Inspired by the Shakespearean play Hamlet, The Banquet unfolds a story about power struggle in the royal court, which eventually climaxes at a night banquet. The film promises a thrilling visual experience with its carefully designed details. Set in 907 AD, when the Tang Dynasty is in tatters, Zhang Ziyi stars as the young Empress Wan, who used to be in love with Prince Wu Luan but is now his step-mother. The late emperor's brother Li comes to throne and sees Wu Luan, now living away from the palace indulging himself in arts, a great threat to his power. He sends assassins to kill Wu Luan but the mission fails. The young prince returns to the palace and meets Empress Wan, who is newly married to Li, and a young girl Qing who falls for him. Emperor Li decides to host a banquet, but everyone has a hidden agenda.

Blood Brothers (Tian tang kou)

Plot: Classic tale of love, brotherhood, and betrayal in 1930s Shanghai. The closing film of the 64th Venice Film Festival, Blood Brothers brings together a dream cast of Hong Kong, Taiwan, and Mainland stars. Daniel Wu (Protege), Liu Ye (Curse of the Golden Flower), and Tony Yang (Ming Ming) serve as the core of the film, the trio of brothers whose souls are tested in the big city. Boasting big budget production values, Blood Brothers creates the aura of Old Shanghai with stylish cinematography and beautiful wardrobe and set design. Fung and his best friends, brothers Kang and Hu, leave the countryside together to make it big in Shanghai. Things aren't so easy in the city, however, and the brothers stumble and toil until opportunity brings them to Club Paradise and ruthless mob boss Hong. While Kang embraces his newfound power in the Shanghai triad, Fung and Hu are less comfortable with the crime and violence, sending the brothers slowly but surely down opposite paths. Fung falls for Hong's woman, sassy nightclub singer Lulu who is also involved with Hong's top henchman Mark. When Hong catches scent of the betrayal, he sends Kang to finish off business, leading the brothers to meet at gunpoint on a cold Shanghai night.

The Sun Also Rises (Zai tai yang sheng qi de di fang)

Plot: Making use of an elliptical narrative with four overlapping threads, The Sun Also Rises opens in 1976 with the topsy-turvy lives of a harried young man and his seemingly crazed mother in a quiet village in eastern China. The brigade leader of his village, the son is constantly tending to his mother's strange habits and disappearing routine, which hint of a story-laden past. In another part of China, university professor Liang attracts the attentions of a seductive nurse and then a persistent mob when he gets accused of sexual harassment. He can only turn to friend Tang for help. Seemingly unrelated lives begin to intersect in the past and present when Tang is sent to the young brigade leader's village for reform labor. Like his previous two features, The Sun Also Rises is set in a politically sensitive period, primarily the waning days of the Cultural Revolution.
